Site is the narrow, larger ship described in the last session. It has a horizontally patterned flag with red in it. The hull has a wide rim that is a darker color than the rest of the hull. On the rim is a perfectly round railing. The railing is at chest height if a 5'7" tall person stands next to it. The ship has 2-3 levels above deck on it. The ship is over 10 years old and looks utilitarian ('like' a fishing vessel) and not like a pleasure craft. The ship is metallic, spindly and top-heavy.

The men on the ship are dark-haired and tan skinned: very swarthy looking. They are not speaking english. They speak a rapid, melodic tongue, though the context of the speech is harsh. The language is kind of like Spanish.

The ship originates from a point that is thousands of miles to the south, south-east of the rendezvous point. After rendezvous the smaller craft unloads at a location between Jacksonville and Daytona Beach, FL. Concerning this I had a brief visual of water breaking on rocks 'like' against a jetty or steep rocky coast.
